- a Yugoslav artillery lieutenant in the reserve was asked to report to the military offices in the Eighth District, Belgrade, 1 where he was given new military orders assigning him to Rankovicevo.

 The military directive read: "As soon as a general mobilization is called, either via the radio or the press, you must proceed immediately by the quickest means at your disposal to Rankovicevo."
- 2. On the same day between sixty to one hundred reserve officers were also called to the Eighth District, where they too received new military orders. One officer was overheard being given orders to report to Uzice in case of a general mobilization.

Comment: This is believed to signify a Belgrade military zone rather than a military district.
